Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: The Examiner agrees that there is no specific discussion with regard to activating the receiver after the transmitter is activated, however, the Examiner re-iterates his contention that the inherency of said limitation is met by Liu, as stated in the Office Action dated 04/18/2006 on page 3. The receiver will be idle until it begins to receive signals transmitted from the transmitter. Essentially, this explains the functionality and relationship between a transmitter and a receiver, and therefore the receiver of Liu is not activated until after the transmitter transmits, or is itself activated.
